

ABSTRACT

A call management technique implemented using a call routing engine is described. The technique of the present invention may be used to advantage to implement dialed number translation techniques in a global system connected to different telephone networks.